

THE MORNING APPEAL.

THURSDAY MARCH 7

A SNORT FROM ELSTNER.

Carson, March 5, 1895.

EDITOR APPEAL:—An unbridled candor supported by facts compels me to assert my disapproval of your repetition of the Sacramento Bee applying these hard words "Scoundrel or Fool," to Cleveland or Carlisle, and I move to amend by striking out the words "Scoundrel or Fool" and inserting statesman and patriot.

Statesmen and patriots have heretofore and after been misrepresented and traduced and it is not surprising that in these days of demagoging that Cleveland and Carlisle are surviving the abuse of demagogues for partisan purposes.

Persons with unprejudiced minds who have observed the juggling of New York bankers with the United States Treasury from 1870 to March 4, 1893, excepting the period between March 4, 1885 and March 5, 1889, and understand the condition of the Treasury and the character of currency and become familiar with the agreement under which the late issue of bonds were sold, will vote to adopt the proposed amendment.

With $500,000,000 of greenbacks and treasury notes in the hands of New York bankers, the Treasury could easily be kept issuing bonds forever, in order to hold the gold reserve. On the other side the bankers with $500,000,000 of gold at command could hire with profit to themselves assistance in protecting the Treasury and the credit of the country, but they have never evinced a desire other than to make money out of the Government by scheming and handling the Treasury as a glazier does his putty. The mode of dealing with the present Treasurer, anxiously to be adopted by the bankers, was similar to that which they had long practiced with other Treasurers and would be nothing more or less than an endless use of greenbacks and treasury notes in purchasing bonds.

The agreement with the syndicate composed of Morgan & Co., and the Rothschilds, the fulfillment of which no one will doubt, will hold in check the constant attack on the gold reserve at least until the Wilson tariff begins to give a surplus. Then the necessity of bond selling will end.

It sounds well to sell bonds to home people, but if they refuse to take them on reciprocal or mutual lines and neighbors will do so, bonds should go to neighbors instead of home people.

That the bonds were sold at a low premium is true, it is also true that the sale was the best that could be made under the conditions and situations. Faithful and country loving citizens, should bear in mind that the present Administration has so far met successfully one of the most awkward financial emergencies that has ever been known in our country. When it took charge credit was gone and confidence had been withdrawn from both at home and abroad. The country was threatened to be driven to liquidation under a receiver. The Administration has replaced the credit and today it is everywhere the very best.

The Bee says that Cleveland is either the confidant and confederate or the dupe of swindlers. The fact is there is not a feature in the late bond transaction or any other transaction of either Cleveland or Carlisle that could be possibly so construed as to sustain such assertion. New York bankers know that neither Cleveland nor Carlisle are dupes nor can they be made confidants or swindlers, and that is the course of the bankers' dislike to the President and Treasurer.

M. R. Elstner.
